Diversified Agriculture is Needed.

(The Cotton Journal.)

It may be taken as a truism that no agricultural section of any agricultural country can depend upon one crop for its maintenance. The old saying that it is not well to put all the eggs into one basket applies with peculiar fitness to the business of farming. The cotton growers of the South must modify their present system of extensive cotton production to the exclusion of crop rotation and the value of diversified agriculture. We must have in the future a more specific and impressive campaign of education along the lines of intensive cotton culture and a wider extensive planting of needed food products on the farm. We do not wish to be understood as advocating a reduced cotton acreage to the extent of developing a scarcity of raw cotton to meet the demands of the consuming world. Such a course would be fatal to the cotton growing interests in the South in more ways than one. We want to see a sufficiency of raw cotton produced each year to meet all needs of consumption, but we deprecate the present system employed by the growers in supplying that demand. The sensible thing for each man to do is to plant fewer acres in cotton, cultivate and fertilize these few acres to the plow better and under a higher type of intelligent husbandry produce an increased yield of lint cotton per acre. The acres which will not be needed under this advanced system of modern farming to be planted in corn, wheat, oats, peas, potatoes, orchards alfalfa, hay and some in grasses for pasturage. Devote more time to seed selection for planting purposes and get out of the soil all that nature can and will give to those who study; think and try to improve their material welfare. Under these advanced methods the cotton crop will cease to bear the entire burden of the total expense of each cotton farm. The iniquitous credit system which for forty years has dragged the growers, bound and broken, at its relentless chariot wheels, will no longer exist, while the growers will each year grow in permanent prosperity and strength.

Little Alma Moree.

One of the saddest funerals ever conducted in our city was that of little Alma Moree Saturday. Alma was the fourteen months old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Moree of Mayo, and was burned to death at their home Thursday afternoon of last week. The mother having stepped out for a minute, left Alma and her five-year-old sister alone, when the elderly lighted a splinter and gave it to the little one. Her clothes ignited and in a few moments she was burned to death. She was brought here Friday afternoon for burial, but the excessive rain prevented it. Mr. E. P. Groover took the family to his house and kept them over night, and the burial took place at one o'clock Saturday. Many were the kind words, and tears of sympathy by the ladies who called on the heart-broken mother. Mr. and Mrs. Moree feel under great obligations to Mr. and Mrs. Groover for their boundless hospitality and kindness. Mr. Groover had never met either of them, but without waiting for ceremony, he took them right into his home and cared for them as though he had known them always. Such is Christianity.

Public Speaker Interrupted

Public speakers are frequently interrupted by people coughing. This would not happen if Foley's Honey and Tar were taken, as it cures coughs and colds and prevents pneumonia and consumption. The genuine contains no opiates and is in a yellow package. Suwannee Drug Company. dec-dw
